

James Warner, UK Met Office

James is a scientist based in the regional model evaluation and development team at the UK Met Office. His interests involve tropical weather processes with a particular focus over tropical Africa, and use process-based evaluation to understand how our models perform in these regions.